Guidelines for Writing a Proposal

Information contained in this document serves as a guide to assist individuals wishing to conduct research in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice (TDCJ). Proposal requirements are noted under each of the specific types of research projects managed by the Executive Services Department. All research proposals must explicitly state how TDCJ will benefit from the research results.

If the proposed study involves the participation of human subjects (offenders), then the researcher must obtain approval by an Institutional Review Board (IRB) prior to submitting the complete application. Additionally, the IRB must also approve any survey documents or questionnaires used for the study along with the informed consent form used to obtain offender participation.

The approved proposal and attendant documents should accompany the research application and be forwarded to the address below:
